Profile

I am currently studying to become a Web Application Developer, and this project reflects my learning journey. My background in healthcare and pharmacy assistance taught me accuracy, responsibility, and attention to detail, which are essential in writing reliable code. Working in childcare and studying pedagogy and psychology helped me understand people better, so I focus on building websites that are clear, supportive, and easy to use. My sport and personal trainer studies strengthened my discipline, consistency, and goal-oriented mindset, which I apply to every development task.

I am motivated to combine these experiences into practical, user-focused web applications as I continue growing in this field.
